

SEEKING STUDY PARTICIPANTS

A Simulation-Based Study on Women Social Workers and Incel Clients

Using simulated practice (i.e., trained actor enacting a client), this study explores what it might be like for women-identifying clinicians to work with incel clients (involuntarily celibate men who are often sexist).

You can join if you:

- 1 Identify as a woman
- 2 Have an MSW
- 3 Have been doing direct/clinical practice for at least the last two years

What's involved?

- Engage with 1 simulated incel client (i.e., trained actor) for 30 minutes, followed by a 1 hour interview about your experiences
- Up to 2 hours of online participation using Zoom
- Receive a small token of appreciation for your time

I'm interested! What's next?

Contact the researcher by emailing or scan the QR code below!

ruxi.gheorghe@carleton.ca

SCAN ME

